Naughty Billy

by Dr. Peter Wheatley

*Billy is naughty.
I don't think he cares,
He's left all his toys at the top of the stairs.
The drawers and the cupboards are placed all ajar,
And there's mummy's rings in his little blue car!*

*Billy is naughty,
He's chased the poor cat
Onto the bookcase and there it just sat
With its tail all atwilt and its fur all on end;
I thought I told Billy that puss was his friend.*

*Billy is naughty.
Do you know that he thinks
That his crayons are things to be pushed down the sinks!
His old cuddly bear has only one ear
One wonders at times just how well it can hear.*

*Billy is naughty.
If only he could
Make an effort one morning and try to be good.
But a pair of pearl pegs is all that you see
When you ask 'Who put marbles in Grandmother's tea?'*

*Billy is naughty -
But what can you say
When you look at his face at the end of the day.
Is it 'Stand over there' or 'No supper tonight',
Or a kiss on both cheeks as you put out the light?*

The Markets

by E.C.

*The season of the markets is with us once again
With tradesmen crowding in from near and far
To set up stalls and tables (so often in the rain)
And unload their tempting goods from van and car.*

*On Sundays there's the big one, on the airfield down the road,
Long lanes lined up with bargains by the score;
With early eager dealers watching every boot unload
It's sundry lots and pans and pots, and more.*

*To watch this frantic rush of setting up is really fun.
If you get there when they're starting, good and early,
You'll see dealers stagger, trot or even run
With their boxes, through the busy hurley-burly.*

*Later you'll find cakes and fruit and veg, and tools galore
And potted plants, and underpants - all sizes
And packs and tins of food like a supermarket store
And Bric-a-Brac to ratch through, for surprises.*

*So, keep hoping that the weather's good every market day
But, if the threatening rain and winds and cold
come back
Don't go near to hear the things the tradesmen say
About Silloth's summer weather, when they pack!*
